

Trainer Overview

→ INDOOR AIR QUALITY

→ Trainer

Dr. Julie Riggs DProf. – Academic Practitioner - MSc, CMIOSH, OSHCR

As a passionate academic practitioner, Julie Riggs has worked as a health and safety professional, at operational and strategic levels, for over 20 years in a range of industries in the UK and Europe delivering effective health, safety and well-being management programmes which includes compliance, business strategy, risk management, policies and procedures, training and best practice projects.

Dr Riggs has a Doctorate in the field of IAQ and an MSc degree (distinction) in Occupational Health and Safety Management from Middlesex University.

Dr Riggs would describe herself as an academic practitioner and writes, lectures and conducts research within OSH and IAQ. Her research has featured in various national media and press. She is the founder of IAQUK and has developed and deliver IOSH's CPD Indoor Air Quality Certificate.

Her interests include health and safety, IAQ, female leadership, ethical safety practices, public health and the academic practitioner relationship.

Further details: www.drjulieriggs.co.uk

→ Membership, Qualifications and Accreditations

- CMIOSH - Chartered Member of IOSH (114215)
- Occupational Safety and Health Consultants Register
- Membership to BOHS and UKIEG
- Doctorate of Professional Studies (DProf) - Middlesex University (2013)
- MSc in Occupational Health & Safety - Middlesex University (2007)
- Diploma in Safety Management - British Safety Council - (2004)
- Various health and safety certificates
- A panel member for the HSE's Fee for Intervention (FFI) Dispute Panel.
- Author and lecturer of IOSH's IAQ certificate
- Trainer for NEBOSH certificate & Diploma courses
- Trainer for IOSH certificates
- Founder of www.IAQUK.org.uk
- Guest lecturer for BSc and MSc safety, health and environmental students
- Writer for safety publications
- Broadcasting work, including radio interviews BBC interviews (Jeremy Vine), Channel 4